The initial stage of the maintenance process is planning, which involves communication with our customers, receipt of the tank, and development of a repair plan in accordance with quality standards and specifications.

Page 5

The maintenance process commences with cutting of the damaged parts using the latest modern and advanced cutting machines and tools, followed by providing high-quality replacements.

The welding process is initiated through the use of professional welders with accredited welding certificates in accordance with American and international specifications, as well as the accreditation of international companies in Saudi Arabia (ASME)

All work is carried out to the highest professional standards and is continuously monitored by quality technicians to ensure that any potential errors are identified and rectified.

Once the welding process is complete, it is tested in accordance with international specifications using a pressure test to guarantee the quality of the welding and repair process. The entire repair process is then checked and reviewed by technicians.

Once the quality of the repair has been confirmed, the tank is polished by professional technicians using modern materials and equipment that are suitable for the material of the tanks.
